INTERPRETING POLITICAL CARTOONS

Activity 7

THE GATES TO IMMIGRATION CLOSE

During World War I, there was a rise in antiforeign feelings among Americans. All over the country, for example, German street names were replaced with non-German names. After the war, a new flood of immigrants entered the country, and antiforeign feelings rose to a fever pitch. Workers worried that immigrants would compete for jobs and, because they would work for lower wages, drive down wages. Many feared that a wave of communism would spread over the land. As a result, many Americans grew suspicious of people who were "different." During the 1920s, the United States government passed a series of laws restricting immigration. These new laws established a quota system, which limited the number of immigrants entering the United States.

Directions: The cartoon on this page represents the feelings of millions of Americans as the decade of the 1920s got underway. Study the cartoon, and then answer the questions that follow.
